LC Tabloids

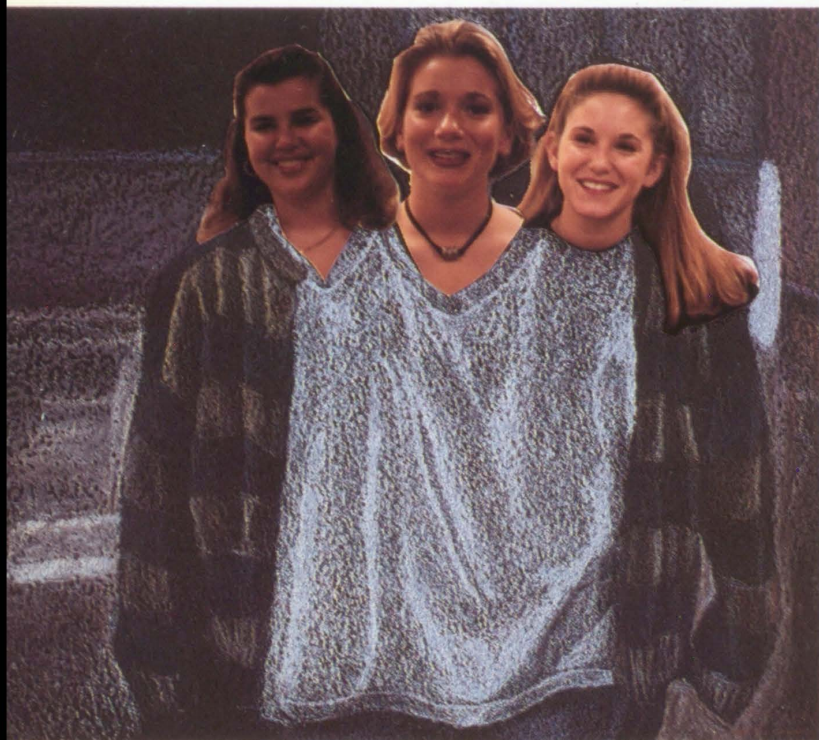

Have you ever been at the grocery store stuck in the checkout line behind the woman who insists on buying five carts full of groceries? Of course, there is no other lane open for you to escape to. So you pick up one of those cheesy tabloids so you do not fall asleep right there in the middle of the store. You decide to pick up the issue with the picture of the 300 lb. sumo baby. You laugh hysterically at the obviously bogus picture. The cashier does not notice your obnoxious chuckle because she is too busy checking out the lady's five carts of groceries. Finally, after waiting for what seems like hours reading the tabloids you get your groceries checked out and paid for.

This page is Quiver's version of those phony magazines. Obviously, these pictures are not real. The yearbook staff created these images with creativity and a little help from some LC students.

Thanks to those who were brave enough to appear on these pages.

LC
UNRAVELED

Emerging from the garages and basements of the Tri-Town area, LC students displayed their unknown talent hidden beneath the lyrics of their songs. They released their personal opinions of the world today. Students participating in bands said that being in a band gave them a means to express themselves in a way that they could not in school.

Performers shared the same feelings about what music does for them. Junior Pete Grimmer stated, "Music is good, because it gives you a way to express your creativity."

Pete was not the only one who felt this way. Brad Biancardi said, "Inventing music is the best, because it is exactly how you feel." In some cases, students could express themselves better with their music than they could in a school paper.

All the students who were in bands took it seriously, but some more than others. One student who took his music very seriously was junior Jason Panozzo, who had been playing for three years and was a member of the underground punk band "Catch 22." Jason said, "We are an underground punk band. We are not doing it for the money, or to get on the radio, or to make videos. We are doing it to be known in underground music." "Catch 22" signed a record deal and had many performances, their best considered to be New Year's Eve at Off the Alley.

LC's band members made their voices heard as they fought for a talent show or battle of the bands. Senior Rob Jungsma, a member of the band "Ground Zero," said that for him the talent show was one of his best performances. Although the talent show was open to everybody, Biancardi said, "The talent show should only be for people with talent."

Some disagreed. Grimmer stated, "It (talent show) should be open to anybody, that way everybody can see what kind of talent the school has."

Students involved in bands probably all agreed that a band offered something positive for everybody. Not only could you express yourself with the type of music you played, but you also met a lot of new people. Senior Andy Muntean said, "Being in a band is a family type thing, you get to know everybody really well."

homecoming:

OUT AND ABOUT

The fiery blaze of the word Indians shot through the sky Friday night, signaling the official start of the Homecoming football game. Fans tossed toilet paper rolls to cheer on the mighty Indians. Hundreds of LC fans were gathered to watch the team smear the Crown Point Bulldogs. Players waited in anticipation as the first kick of the game darted across the dismal sky. However the Indians brought light to the darkened sky proving once again LC was unstoppable. LC defeated Crown Point with a 34-14 lead. The Indians made real Puppy Chow out of them!

Hundreds of fans gathered for a time of celebration at the Pizza Hut in Schererville. All of the vast team spirit erupted Thursday night at the parade. All of the classes brought their floats that were all depictions of commercials. Seniors took first place with their Little Ceasars statue of the toga man. It was a close race, but coming in second was the juniors' 2000 flushes float and then the freshman float and then the sophomore float. The parade of school spirit started at Redar Park in Schererville. Students were upset at the fact that this was the first year that candy throwing was prohibited because that was an exciting part of the parade. Also the band played an award winning piece of music that helped them to place ninth at the state competition.

The 1994 Homecoming weekend was definitely a weekend to be remembered with a burst of school pride that will never diminish!

The seniors put the finishing touches on their float, which won first place at Redar Park.

SGA officers Nada Vavan, Beth Roach, Allison Gulden, and Liz Repasi, all seniors, wrap the "INDIANS" in paper towels for the lighting before the game.

"THE MAN WHO CAME TO DINNER"

... and would not leave

As the curtain went up, the tradition continued when the LCTG produced "The Man Who Came to Dinner" as the fall play. Rated by theater followers as outstanding and well received, only four performances followed the challenging months of long practice sessions due to football team's participation in the state contest.

The play opened on a cold December day at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Stanley, played by Jason Utesch and Marty J. Lentz. The exciting opening offered instant commotion when the Stanleys were visited by Mr. Sheridan (Jason Utesch). Sheridan, an important radio personality, was arriving for dinner when he fell and fractured his hip. Unable to leave the Stanley home, the injured Sheridan proceeded with demands upon the Stanleys and their whole family. Putting it bluntly, Mr. Sheridan took over the household from running up their phone bill to inviting ex-cons for a night of entertainment. Then he had the nerve to broadcast his Christmas Eve radio show.

Wishing him a speedy recovery, guests began pouring unusual gifts to Sheridan. These gifts included a box of cockroaches, a mummy case, an octopus, and a brassiere.

As the play progressed, so did the romance, when Sam Spencer fell in love with June Stanley. Although the couple planned to marry, Mr. Stanley refused to approve the marriage. Further complicating matters, June ran away to marry Sam in Mr. Stanley's factory. To make matters worse, when Sheridan finally recovered enough to leave, he fell and reinjured himself on the way out.

Considered a great production by those who viewed it, the fall play offered a great experience for those involved. Michelle Gilbert stated, "I thought it was a great show, because not only was the cast very talented, but we were also very close."

Dana Jones, 12, who plays the unusual Harriet Stanley, prepares to give a gift of holly to Mr. Whiteside to wish him a merry Christmas.

Juniors Amiee Estep, Annie Eckhart, and Marty Lentz see their names in Time while at the Stanley's house.

Leon Simon, 11, discusses with Jason Utesch, 12, his troubles about his marriage plans to June Stanley, played by Michelle Gilbert.

Seniors Skip Palka and Michelle Gilbert nervously await their formal introduction to Mr. Whiteside, who is played by senior, Jason Utesch.

Professor Metz, played by sophomore Paul Storiato, stopped by Mr. Whiteside's house for a short Christmas visit.

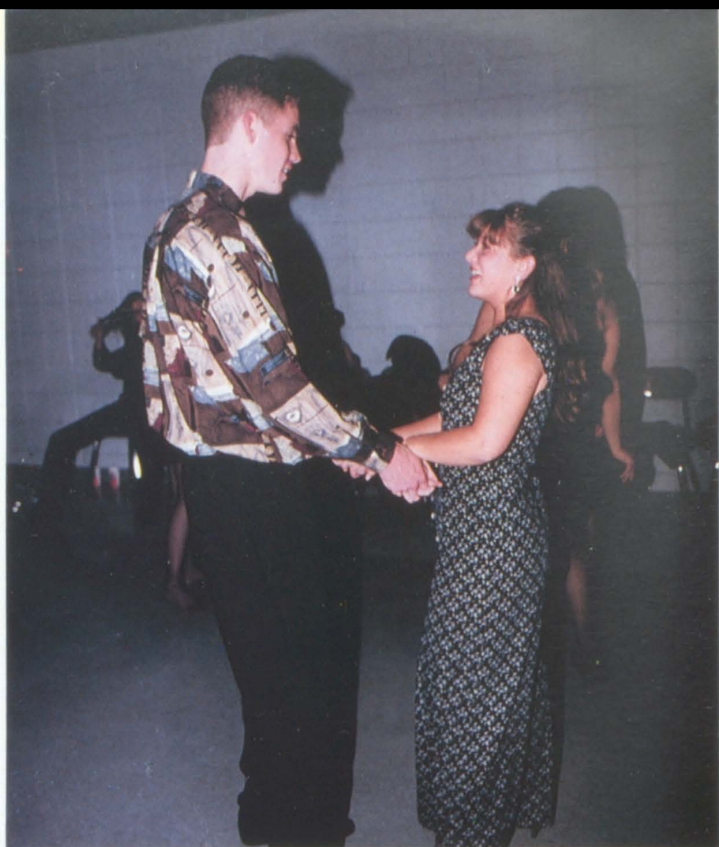

Ginnie Stallard, 11, and Kyle Ross, 12, stare with amazement as Mr. Whiteside listens to his unusual gift of cockroaches.

Senior Ryan Matasovsky plays Beverly Caralton, who comes to wish Mr. Whiteside a very merry Christmas.

Dancing with some friends, Katie Wendlinger, 10, and Anthony Matulis, 10, enjoy themselves and the tropical surroundings.

Mandy Henry and her date from another school find some quiet time to talk away from the main dancing crowd.

Tracy Purcell, 12, and her date get closer and experience the evening together.

"Hey! What's up?" Shawn Bowman, 12, shows off his fancy dancing for all to see.

"Wow! What a dance!" Aaron Vela, 10, and Carl Gomez, 10, get a little goofy as the night wears to an end.

"Move a little bit closer," Ted Zych, 11, Missy Muchesko, 10, and some friends have a group picture taken to remember the "Tropical Nights."

"tropical nights" HOMECOMING IN PARADISE

"Tropical Nights!" Sound familiar? Of course it does, that was the theme of the dance. You know, the one with the ships in the background of the pictures. The night was filled with stars and the romance came out in all that were there. Couples filled the dance floor as songs by REM, Depeche Mode, and the Spin Doctors filled their ears. Even some country music was played. Ranae Mistarz, 12, commented, "The music was great, we haven't had a better selection in a long time."

Skip Palka, 12, and Dana Jones, 12, were crowned King and Queen of the Homecoming court. Palka stated, "It was fun, and I got a little crazy, but no one has to know about that!"

Allison Gulden, 12, president of SGA, commented, "The dance was an overall success and it was nice to see that all of our hard work and time spent after school resulted in such a terrific outcome. Also, it being my senior year, it was a great way to start the last year of our high school career off. Much time and effort was spent by all the officers which contributed to the planning of the dance."

As the evening came to a close, many fond memories were shared and students found that the time spent together added to their senior year memories.

Abby Cooke, Al Sutliff, Mike Molenda, and Sam Bineck, all seniors, get together to boogie the night away on Oct. 2.

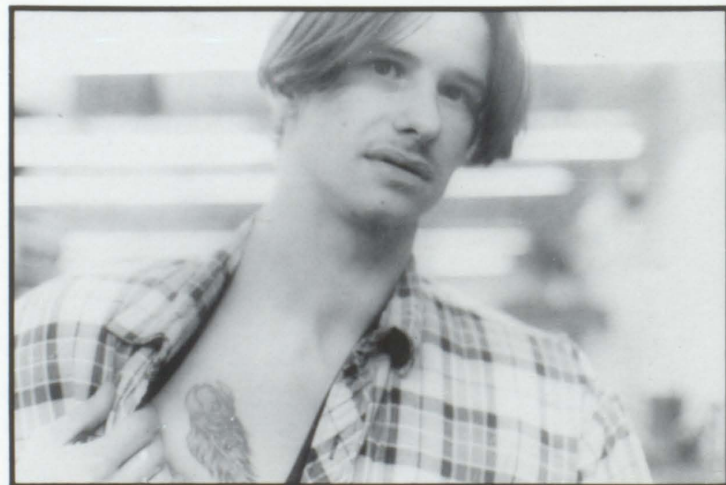

Laci Cody, 10, decided to get the sun tattooed on her ankle after seeing friends get theirs. The sun represents life and happiness.

Paul Wozniak, 12, has Scooby-Doo on his leg because it reminds him of his childhood, and it means something special to him.

Since bass fishing is his life, Mike Todorovich, 12, felt no other tattoo was suited for him except a bass.

Dave Steinbeck, 11, has always liked vikings, and that helped him choose his tattoo. He plans to get a couple more tattoos because he loves them.

After seeing other people's tattoos, Jill Hoffman, 11, was inspired. She wanted a frog, but friends helped decide on the rose.

permanent body art

Much to the disgust of their parents, teachers, and perhaps even some of their friends, many at LC opted to permanently alter their bodies. Some said the idea hit them that they could really have some say about their bodies—far beyond changing the color of their hair or dieting to extremes to maintain that thin-is-in look. Tattoos, once thought only for the tough guys, gained so much popularity that all kinds of teenage men and women paid a pretty penny for someone to poke needles in their skin to draw designs of their choosing. Although some tattoos were chosen from a book, others were the dreamed design of the proud owner, who could boast that he (or she) had a one-of-a-kind art form. The common places for tattoos were the upper arms, backs of shoulders, legs, ankles or chests.

Tattoos began gaining in popularity among the teenage set when favorite cartoon characters started showing up on people parts. Other popular subjects depicted something about the wearer's personality. Some were evil-looking, while others were artistic or simply pretty.

Why would anyone get a tattoo? They hurt, right? According to Bob Wernersbach, 12, they did. He said, "Yes, it hurt! The outline took three hours to do and it's not even colored yet." Others claimed their tattoos didn't hurt so much. Smaller ones hurt less, while the placement could add to the pain, since the amount of muscle and bone could make a big difference.

Several new tattoo parlors went into business, but students cautioned each other to make sure their choice was a safe, clean place. Wernersbach went to Famous Leg's in Gary. Another place known to almost all was Roy Boys. Brian Jackson, 12, chose Roy Boys when he was 16 years old—and with his parents' permission, since the law stated that the tattoo recipient must be at least 18 years old. Jackson commented, "I got this because I thought I was manly, and for wrestling."

If tattoos were manly, then some girls must have felt macho! Girls opted for tattoos, too, for the same or other reasons. Mostly they claimed: "They're neat!" and many said they'd always wanted one.

Although it is not colored yet, Bob Wernersbach, 12, is proud of his tattoo of a man in a straight jacket.

"HOW TO SUCCEED IN BUSINESS WITHOUT REALLY TRYING"

the results were wonderful

LCTG performed "How To Succeed In Business Without Really Trying" as their Spring play.

Kyle Ross, a senior, portrayed J. Pierrpont Finch, a window washer who was determined to succeed in business. His business of interest was the World Wide Wicket Company, which was run by President J.B. Biggley. Finch read his book, followed the instructions carefully, and kept the book by his side at all times. He was offered a job in the mailroom and promoted to the head of advertising in one day.

All the while, he had an admirer, Rosemary Pilkington, who was a secretary played by Ginnie Stallard, and an enemy, Bud Frump, the President's nephew, played by Ryan Matasovsky. Frump was a "mama's boy" and told her everything that ever happened at the office. His mother told her sister and therefore proceeded onto Biggley.

Finch manipulated everyone's moves and even created situations where he would come out on top.

A new secretary, Hedy LaRue, played by Lisa Waite, was hired because she was the daughter of a longtime friend of Biggley. She was an energetic, guy attracting, airhead who was also trying to get Finch. He, of course, refused her because he was working his way to the top.

Finch's promotional idea for advertising was a contest by hiding the company's stocks in the building and it backfires because LaRue tells everyone where they are hidden. His idea failed and everyone disliked him. It looked like Finch's career in WWW would be over but, the chairman of the board was a fellow window washer and sympathized with him and his job was saved.

Finch finally reached his goal of being successful and had time to finally get together with Pilkington—and marry her.

FUN WITH THE FLAKES

lc students beat the winter chill

Upon breaking from the shadowy C-Hall foyer to the great outdoors, students were blinded by the blazing sun in the cloudless blue sky. Horrifying freezing winds stung their cheeks, as frostbite began to work at their ears. That was where the fun began, far across the ice rink of a parking lot, mountains of snow had accumulated, as if solely for the pure enjoyment of the student body. Snowballs started to fly.

Although the temperature was lethally low during the winter season, determined LC winter fanatics were not stopped from enjoying the slopping, the sliding and all around good time that ice and snow have to offer. Kira Meinzer commented,

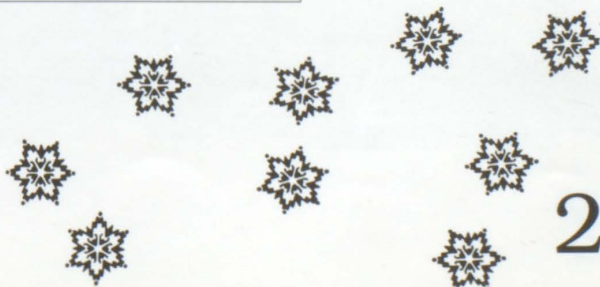

"The parking lot is insane after a snow, because you can't see the parking spaces, and people don't know how to angle park."

From the parking lot, the LC winter enthusiasts ventured to Mt. Baldy in Michigan City, a favorite place to sled because of the steep slope that gets sledders flying downhill at 30 mph. Brad Gellert (12) said, "Mt. Baldy is a treacherous dune to climb in which one could lose their life at any step! Actually, it is a cool place to sled in the winter."

Leon Simon, on the other hand, found no joy in the winter season. "I hate winter because I don't have my driver's license, and my Huffy doesn't have snow tires."

Students rush out into the courtyard in between periods to get the first snowball fight of the year underway.

if the shoe fits...

Finding the perfect footwear was essential to complete the right look. Many students agreed that a pair of shoes could make or break an outfit. Comfort, style, cost, and uniqueness are some of the qualities students looked for in shoes.

Of course, the mall had many of the shoes everyone was wearing. The stores carried the basic brown shoe that goes with everything to the strangest designs that were indescribable. Most students had a store where they could find all their favorite styles. But, some students went to greater lengths to find a shoe that was to their liking. When asked where Stephanie Hill, 10, found her shoes, she said, "I went to China Town, and they were so cute that I had to buy them."

While there were a small number of students who wore a different pair of shoes every day of the week, much of the student body went for comfort at a low price. Many of the students who worked could not always find the extra money to buy a pair of shoes for every outfit. After hiking to and from the new freshman wing, comfortable shoes were also a must.

After-school activities also influenced the type of shoes students were wearing. Those in track or cross country could often be spotted in their running shoes after school. The cheerleaders frequently wore their shoes along with the matching uniforms on game days. Centralettes could also be seen practicing after school in what were called lyrical sandals. According to Carri Mangan, 12, "They're just wierd looking sandals with no heel that we use in Winter Guard to perform in."

Whatever type of shoes worn by students, they are a nessesary part of everyone's daily dress. Remember "no shirt, NO SHOES, no service."

Stephanie Hill (10) expresses her personal style with her fashionable flower embroidered slippers she purchased in China Town.

Not everyone tries to make a major statement with his shoes. Marc Lazzaro likes to wear the often seen suede leather shoes.

Comfort is a major concern for Melissa Hall when she arrives at home after school. She lounges around and eats a snack in her fuzzy bear feet slippers.

Army combat boots are the newest fashion craze in the area. Josh Scherette picks up on this popular style with his heavy-duty black boots.

Brian McKay sticks with wearing the always popular tennis shoes. These shoes provide comfort style and are often affordable.

Carrie Mangan's shoes serve a specific function in Winter Guard. Performers wear them while practicing various routines.

Krissie Clayton chooses to wear the black leather buckle shoes that many Lake Central students find fashionable.

WINTER FORMAL a hot night in the cold

Believe it or not, there was actually one Saturday in the middle of winter that had students deliberately waking up early. Some spent all day getting ready at home, while others spent mega-amounts of money in beauty salons. What for? Winter Formal!

Girls and guys alike spent nearly all day preparing for this special evening of dancing, pictures and most of all, fun! "Formal was fun, but getting ready took longer than I thought it would. I thought I was going to be late!" Jen Sudac, 12, stated.

Whether out on the dance floor, sitting at a table, or standing in line for pictures, all the couples were entertained by the wide variety of music that the DJ provided. "I liked the DJ this year. He played everything from rap to country so he didn't leave anyone out. I hardly left the dance floor!" Ranae Mlistarz, 12, praised.

Since there was no dinner served at Winter Formal, the traditional and most popular first thing to do afterward was to go somewhere to eat. Some popular restaurants included Glenwood Oaks, The Italian Village, Planet Hollywood, and Michael Jordan's Restaurant in Chicago. However, other couples such as Shawn Bowman, 12, Cathy Barker, 11, Joe Rokita, 12, and Heidi Homrich, 12, went somewhere out of the ordinary to eat. "We girls didn't know about it. The guys got together and planned it. They took us to Shawn's house for a candlelight dinner. We were so surprised!" Heidi Homrich, 12, stated.

Comedy clubs offered an alternative choice. "I had a really good time at the dance and even a better time afterwards at the Funny Farm," Brad Gellert, 12, said.

Winter Formal was held at St. Michael Serbian Center in Lansing Jan. 22. The theme of formal was Winter Wonderland, and the theme song was "At This Moment" by Billy Vera and the Beaters. This year's princess was junior Holly Orr. "This most incredible night couldn't have been more perfect!" screamed Holly.

Even though Winter Formal can be a perfect night, it could also be a hassle. Finding a date, a tux, a dress, and the money to pay for it all was never easy; neither were the decisions such as "who is driving?" or "are we getting a limo?" However, through all the fuss and confusion, it was worth it. Winter Formal always leaves us with lasting memories and lifetime friendships.

Getting down is the fun about dances. Alisha Schmidt, 11, and Kassie Hyman, 11, show just how much fun can be had at Winter Formal.

Having their tickets ready upon arrival, Carrie Besch, 11, Luka Bodrozie, 12, Jill Bonaguro, 12, and her date hand them over to Ms. Johnson.

Nate Jazyk, 12, is held up by his friends after taking a dive from the stage on Jan. 22.

"Mm. Look at all the food!" Mark Radio, 12, and Gina James, 11, get a bite to eat before joining the dance crowd.

Corinne Lemley, 10, and Steve Wegrzyn, 12, share one of the many slow songs played in the "Winter Wonderland."

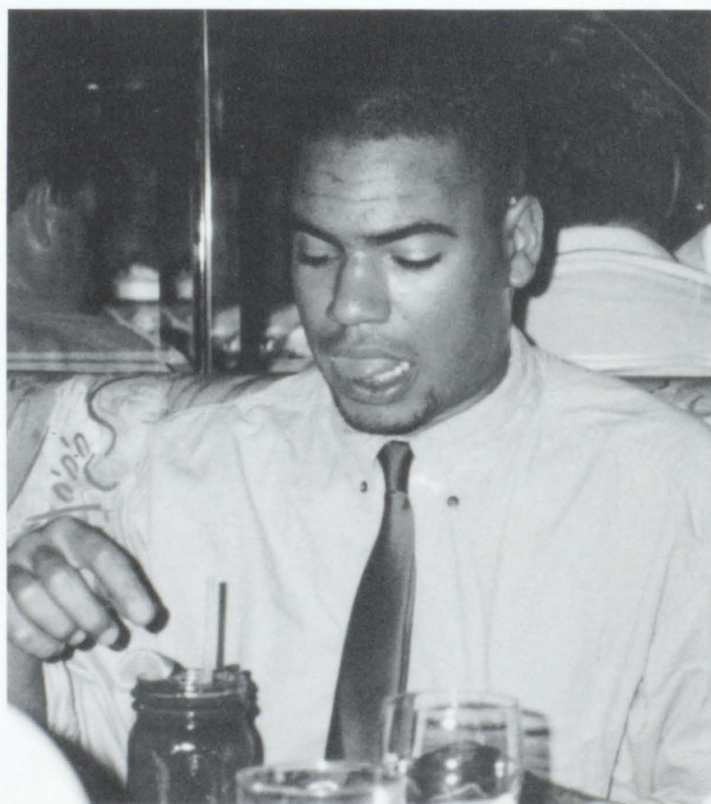

Senior Jen Arcella bring a little bit of America to an island native while visiting the island of Jamaica, over spring break.

Thinking of something to do in front of the photographer while in Cancun, Kelly Ross, 12, and Kira Meinzer, 12, make a lovely addition to Nikki Paganis' head.

A group of French students who traveled to France over spring break enjoy the scenes that the French Riviera offers.

Senior Randall Rosa wonders what it is he is about to take a drink of while eating dinner on a cruise to Jamaica during spring vacation.

Ben Walker, 12, displays a radical air maneuver while skiing in Colorado over spring break.

Chrissy Buchanan, 12, and Trista Berger, 12, take a break from fun in the sun and enjoy a cool drink.

...it just isn't long enough!!

While many LC students experienced the same dull monotony of northwest Indiana, a few lucky ones got to break free from the dullness for spring break. While some students went to Florida with their parents, others chose to be more exotic by traveling to such places as Cancun, Mexico, to the tropics. On the other hand, while most students went on vacation to relax, others went for an all-out adventure, which included a skiing trip to Colorado and camping in Kentucky.

Being that one of the more popular choices for spring break was Florida, that choice seems to have attracted a large number of LC students. Just because sophomore Shannon Anderson thought the sun was the best in Florida did not mean there were not other things the state offered, such as jetskiing in the Gulf or snorkeling. Another hot spot which was catching on with LC students was Cancun. Senior Kira Meinzer stated, "We knew it was warm and a fun place to go, so we went to Cancun." Yes indeed, Florida was exotic, but not as much as Cancun. Cancun had those cute little iguanas running around loose creeping up under your lounge chair and scaring you half to death, as senior Kelly Ross found out.

Some spring break plans did not include warm temperatures at all. Actually one group of senior guys--Mike Oster, Mark Fideli, Kevin Carroll, Quinn Cusson and Brent Kiernan--were not hoping for temperature over the 40's. When most people think of spring break, they do not think of snow skiing, but these guys did. While most people were busy looking for the warmest temperatures possible, the "guys" were trying to suck the last drop out of winter.

While some students were experiencing some of the best weather in the world, some were experiencing some of the rainiest. A group of LC students traveled to France for a one-week vacation. Senior Michelle Stevenson stated, "Although most students try to distance themselves as much as possible from school, French students decided to travel on a school-sponsored trip in order to have the vacation of a lifetime."

No matter where the vacation was taken or whether one was taken at all, most students took advantage of the time away from school and had as much fun as possible. As for the first day back from spring break, well...

Seniors, Kevin Carroll, Mark Fideli, Brent Kiernan, Quinn Cusson, and Mike Oster relax on the slopes in Colorado.

SENIOR BANQUET BUSTIN' LOOSE...

The annual Senior Banquet, which happened Friday, April 22, saw seniors scurrying around their homes getting ready for the big event. Senior Banquet carried the reputation of being better than Prom. The attire remained casual—not so dressy that you couldn't be comfortable for the evening's festivities.

The night began with dinner. Most judged the food as good, but others disagreed. Senior Jenna Baugh commented, "Let me tell ya, I wouldn't pay 20 bucks for a meal like that again!"

Others agreed. Amy McCormick was upset about the amounts of food, claiming there was a shortage of mashed potatoes, but Mark Radio warned, "Stay away from the chicken!"

After dining, the coveted awards were issued with some students receiving more than one, and although seniors laughed and joked about these awards, many were wondering just how many would come to pass.

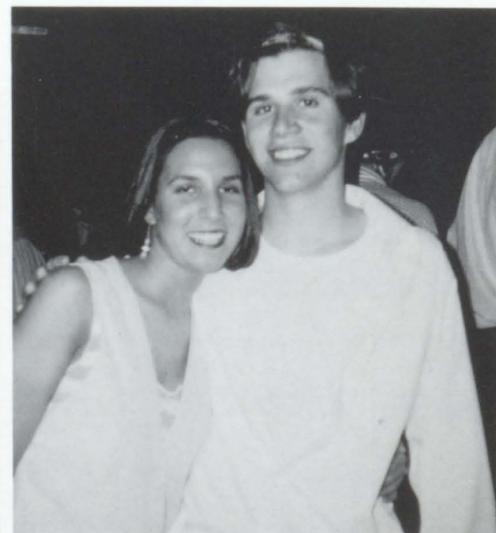

Soon it was the time to get loose. Almost the whole class packed themselves onto the tiny dance floor to enjoy the fun. Kelly Boncyk stated, "Jammin DJ! Hope he's there at Prom!" The dance portion lasted about two hours, and the night wound down toward its end even though no one wanted this memorable evening to quit. The best part, as usual, was everyone being together that one last time, enjoying that one last frivolous blast of fun that really announces the approaching Commencement.

Michele Jalovecky takes her hair down and lets loose on the dance floor.

Chrissy Buchanan and Rhyen Rhodes take a break to cool down from dancing.

MOST LIKELY TO BE LATE TO OWN WEDDING	LISA WAITE

On the evening of May 6 the Junior class presented the 1994 Prom. It was held at the Serbian Social Center in Lansing, Ill. The doors opened at 6 P.M. Those who came early were lucky because picture assignments were given at arrival. Picture appointments were scheduled as late as 9:30 P. M. and at that time of the dance, after hours of dinner and dancing, people began to look worn out.

The theme was "In Your Eyes" by Peter Gabriel. Colors were emerald green, iridescent white, and a lilac purple. Seniors Kevin Carrol and Dana Jones were crowned King and Queen, while Juniors Sean Kennedy and Kristina Divjak were prince and princess.

Dinner was chicken kiev, some veggies, and vanilla ice cream for dessert. Drinks (pop) had to be purchased for as extra, although it was hard to distinguish them from the water.

The music held a variety, from alternative to country, so pretty much everyone was satisfied. After hours of preparation, everything seemed to work out. The Prom was a success and provided memories that will last forever.

Rodney Bowman and Shannon Anderson look on as their friends dance the night away.

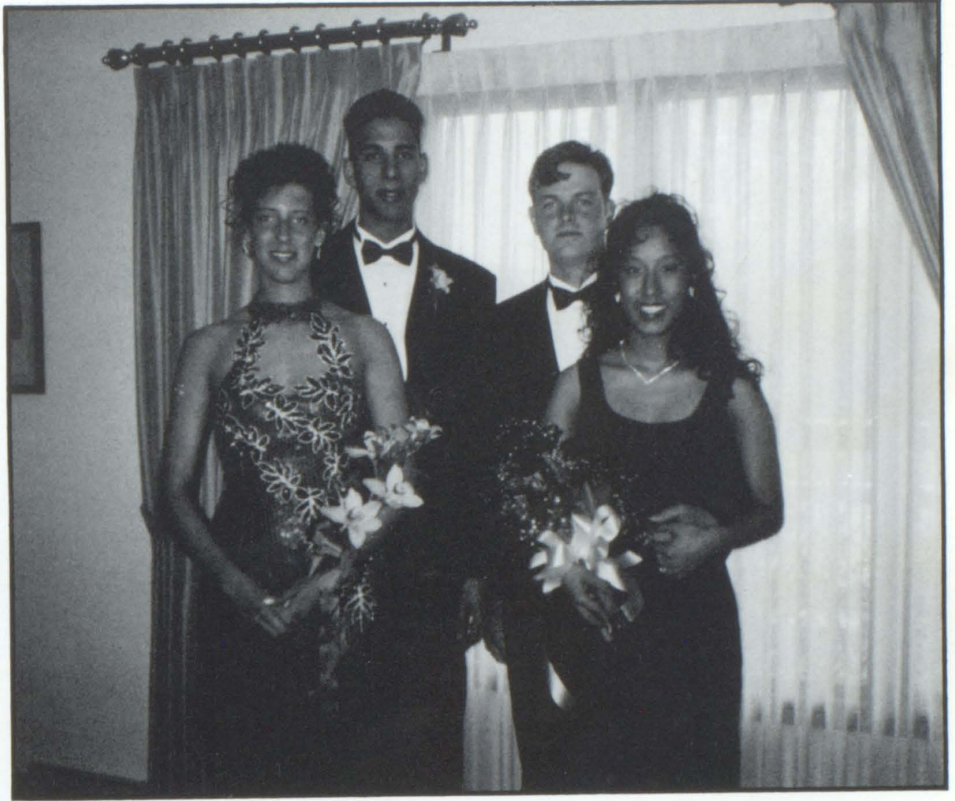

Jeff Hedin and Jeannette Kindernay toast to a happy evening of dancing and fun.

Tony Wise and friend embrace for a special moment.

Linda Cenicerros, Jody Ebert and dates take some quick post-Prom pictures.

Dottie Parson and Dave Kendall cuddle up for an intimate moment.

Jaime Lyons, John Budack, Wayne Rodgers and Jill Pudlo pause to make a memory of their last high school dance.

Nick Galinski, Michelle Stevenson, Mike Pineda, and Amber Lopez decide to take it easy after hours of dancing.

PROM WEEKEND dance is beginning

Prom. One of the most awaited weekends of the year. Juniors, seniors and even a few sophomores enjoyed the "no- sleep fun-filled weekend ." Bank accounts were drained and extra little jobs were done around the house for a small cash bonus. After the enchanted evening of dancing, socializing, and a few post Prom get- togethers or a trip to Chicago, the night was over and all prepared for the next few days. With only a few hours of sleep, some awoke to the sound of a car honking in the driveway. Ann Renzino (12) said, "After such a late night, waking up early in the morning was really hard." Somehow, though, everyone seemed to find a way to get through the eventful weekend.

The traditional prom-goers made the early Saturday morning car trip through all the construction to Great America. After a long car ride, many wandered through the gates into the huge theme park. Though the weather was dismal in the morning, the rest of the day turned out to be nice. With the rush of the roller coasters and the sugar-filled cotton candy, students began to wake up a few hours later. Mike Corty(12) said, "It was fantastic after I had a few cups of coffee and two spins on the Batman."

Then, of course, came the Sunday trip to Turkey Run. With about five hours more sleep, many journeyed off to the popular nature grounds. With hiking gear ready, some students began climbing through rocks and forests while others dove off the notorious suspension bridge. Mike Schaaf (11) said, "When I fall through the air, I feel like Superman. It's so much fun." After the fun filled day of climbing , chasing and swimming, some camped over night while others went home. Kelly Stiglitz (12) said, "Just a small bit of advice--don't go camping after Prom! Things can get a little hectic."

Monday was beach day. After all the toys, goodies and sun tan lotion were packed, once again another car ride was in progress. As beachers gradually turned red, many enjoyed the relaxation and the final day of Prom weekend. Libbe Sunde (12) said, "The beach was so hot but it felt great to finally be able to relax!" Many tried not to think about the next day when all the sunburned beachers had to trudge through the halls.

An important factor of Prom was the money situation. Prom has always been known as expensive. Nate Jazyk (12) said, "It took me about three months to save up all my money and then I watched it dwindle away within hours--but it was well worth it."

Prom weekend was the last school- related activity during the year for friends to get together. Whatever the cost and the time and effort, for most Prom turned out to be great. Amber Lopez (12) said, "It was the greatest time of my senior year and I wish I could do it again."

Seniors Georgiana Ozegovic, Laura Penn, and Kira Meinzer take advantage of the warm weather at the beach on senior ditch day.

Seniors Skip Palka and Dana Jones did something a bit out of the ordinary and went roller blading on the lake front in Chicago, Saturday after Prom.

Phil Goodson, 11, and Jill Basinski, 12, bundle up in all their rain gear to watch the Sox beat the Kansas City Chiefs at Comisky Park .

Mike Oster, 12, Missy Wilmot, 11, and friends take a break from all the rides at Great America to get a picture taken with Sylvester.

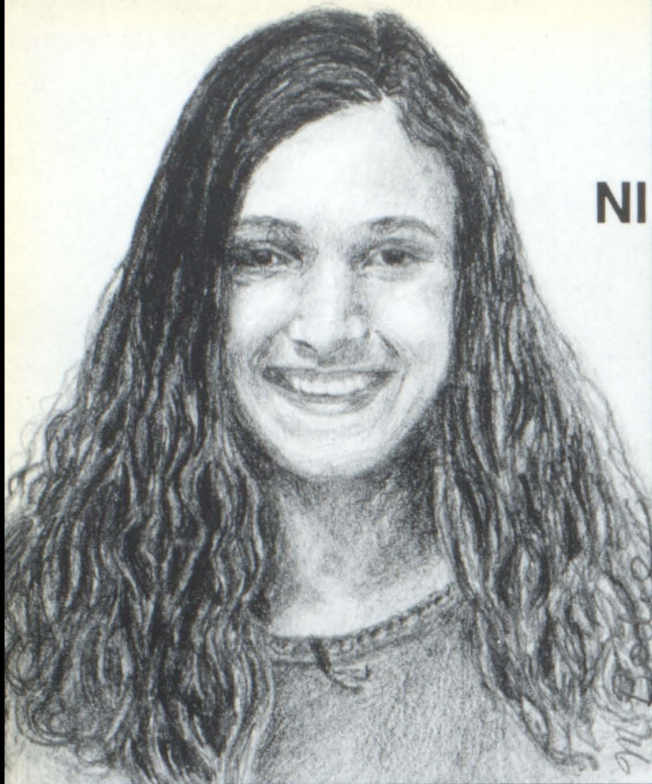

Liz Morgen, 11, checks the outside of her tent while at Turkey Run to be sure that there were no wild bears outside.

Junior Jen Boran, and her date take a horse drawn carriage ride in Chicago despite the cool temperatures and light rain.

Nate "Garth" Jazyk, 12, finds himself a new country friend to hang out with while at Great America in Gurnee, Ill.

ACADEMIC CONTESTS

lc's achievers

LC was overflowing with pride, because we were a school of winners. Not only the athletic teams, but the academics represented LC well in competition.

The Business Professionals of America (BPA) advanced many of its members to state competition. Nick Ivankovic, 11, finished fourth in the state in the Financial Specialist contest, and Ryan Neese, 10, finished ninth. The Financial Analyst team of Rachel Ditola, 12, Ivankovic, and Alys Haller, 12, finished second in the state. Haller also won the Data Assistant contest, and Niki Twardy, 12, took second.

The speech team advanced to the state speech and debate competition. Steve Kitts, 12, competed in Championship Discussion, and Holly Orr, 11, competed in Dramatic Interpretation.

Lauren Rusnak, 12, won the highest scholarship award at the Munster Tri-Town Art Show. Nick DePirro, 12, won best of show in 3-dimensional.

The Science Olympiad Team advanced to state competition, and Holly Franks, 11, Jason Byars, 10, Dan Williams, 9, and Kelly Kurfus, 9, all received third place medals in their competitions.

Academic Superbowl, which consists of English, science, and history, had a contest at Gavit in which they won second overall.

Academic All State chose Lori Brister, 12, and Angie Nagy, 12, who were two of fifteen seniors chosen out of the state. The requirements were participating in at least one half of a season on a varsity team, have a top ten percent of the class grade point average, and great SAT scores.

Many important awards were brought home to LC this year. Congratulations to all of the winners and contestants.

Arby's was the place to go for Paul Ridenour, 10, and Ryan Osika, 10, as they show their excitement after competing at IU for Science Olympiad.

Lauren Rusnak, 12, won the top monetary scholarship award at the Munster Art Show with her self-portrait oil painting called "Balance."

Angie Nagy, 12, and Lori Brister, 12, were chosen as two out of fifteen seniors in the state to compete in the Academic All-State competition.

The BPA state contest in Indianapolis awarded Rachel Ditola, 12, Alys Haller, 12, and Nick Ivankovic, 11, top awards.

"Oh my gosh! I won something!" John Gervais, 11, gasps while in the auditorium where the Science Olympiad winners were announced.

The Science Olympiad team found excitement in all of their winnings from the state contest competed at Indiana University.

Pete Grimmer, 11, and Sandeep Tickoo, 11, work together on an experiment in Chemistry class.

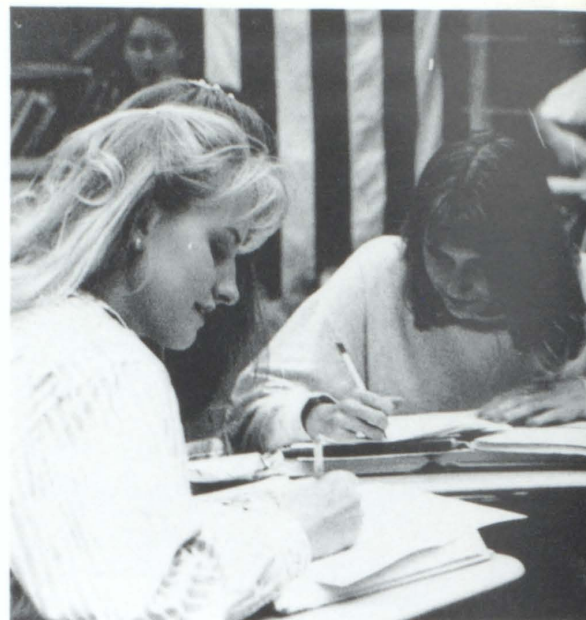

Kelly Thate, 10, and Josh Scherette, 10, put their minds together to pass their biology test. Studying together may be helpful.

Cooperative Learning it really works

A new approach for student comprehension called cooperative learning was encountered by many students in classes during the year. Cooperative learning was an attempt to give students a chance to work together in groups to increase social skills and knowledge. The message from most students about working together in groups was positive. Elena Colon, 9, said, "I think cooperative learning works, because you can put everyone's knowledge together and learn from your mistakes."

Others also seemed satisfied with the new method. Chuck Canty, 11, said, "It enables the student to learn better with people their own age."

Cooperative learning was used widely throughout the school in many different areas. Foreign languages offered group work almost all of the time. Being in a group atmosphere helped some students achieve the task of learning a new language. Jen Steinkraus, 9, said, "In German, we work in groups every day, which helps us learn more."

Math was another area where cooperative learning was used. Students got together in groups and taught each other. If the teacher couldn't get the point across, in groups, students could. Laura Markley, 9, said, "My teacher uses cooperative learning in Algebra, because it helps us understand the tougher problems."

Cooperative learning had a great impact on students' lives. It helped people develop social skills and get along better with other people. Becky Shearer, 9, said, "Cooperative learning will help us later on in life during our careers."

Other people felt the same way about how it would affect their lives. Dean Gulotta, 9, said, "Cooperative learning will help in the future, because if people don't work well together at jobs and other activities, nothing will work out."

The social, communication, and leadership skills learned by students made them feel enthusiastic about learning. The new approach seemed to work well throughout the year for those who had trouble adjusting to working together. Most students enjoyed being with others and learning at the same time. Jeff Hedin, 11, said, "I think it is a more efficient way of learning. It minimizes the work."

Many agreed with what the new approach was trying to achieve. Dave Lohman, 12, said, "It makes a student feel important."

Of course, we knew we weren't always doing what we were supposed to be doing in groups, right?! Sshh! We won't tell!

Gina James, 11, Jen Braatz, 11, Ginnie Stallard, 11, and Jen Consorti, 11, are working on their Vietnam project.

Cooperative learning is popular at L.C. Jen Redar, 11, and Janet Pilch, 11, work together in a group on homework in Mr. Bugaski's class.

Julie Natt, 9, and Angela Roznowski, 9, find some humor in the temperature of boiling water.

Amy Ballard, 10, and Joel Abraham, 10, piece together part of their Biology lab.

Many people at LC take a foods class. Carrie Ashlock, 11, shows off her creativity by decorating cookies.

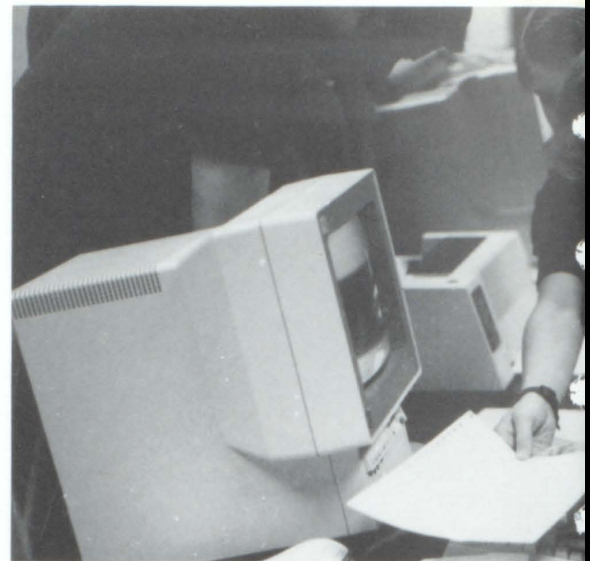

Every other week students receive a school newspaper. Mike Jones, 10, helps a great deal by assisting in printing the newspaper, Scout.

HANDS ON

The Learning Experience

With the abundance of regular classes, there were also many classes that helped the students experience life "Hands On." When preparing for their future, these classes gave them the experience they will need for choosing their careers. Many chose different classes to apply their skills.

Through all the grease and grime of auto, students stayed in high gear throughout the year. While they furthered their experience, repairing and working on cars was their main priority. Jon Swets, 12, said, "This class is very important and will teach me how to do auto repair on my own."

Behind the closed doors of the electronics room, circuits were being put together, volts were measured, and diagrams were drawn. The class was taken by Cecil Matthews, 12, because he wanted to pursue his engineering dreams in college, unlike Paul Frohnapple, 11, who just wanted some household repairing skills.

All the sawing, staining and finishing done in woodworking was well worth it, stated Frank DeBartolo, 11. Skills learned consisted of learning how to plane, working on wood lathes and routing to complete the finished product.

Drafting proved to help students for their future in their architectural careers. The work was difficult because everything had to be precise. Gabriel Villarreal, 12, said, "I enjoy drawing floor plans, houses, and technical drawings."

Expression was one of the most important factors

Beth Urbanczyk

Jerry Kaufman, 9, is using his skill to draw a print. Three dimensional drawings require perfection and skill.

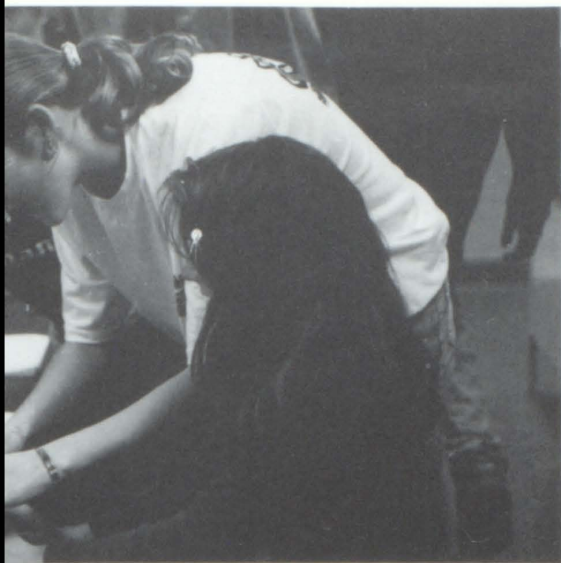

of the visual arts. Ceramics and art classes produced many great pieces that were displayed throughout LC. "I like to express my inner most feelings with a paint brush," said James Sullivan, 11. Acrylic and water paintings in art, along with table pottery and wheel throwing in ceramics classes were completed.

The department concerning household tasks was busy mending clothes and preparing meals while improving their talents. Jeremy Gorelick, 10, said, "We have made pizza, strussel, coffee cake, and eggs and bacon." The rhythm of the sewing machine was heard throughout the halls while Teresa Rietman, 10, was sewing shirts, skirts and other articles of clothing along with her sewing class. The skills learned in all the household department classes will provide the students with a background in the kitchen and behind the pedal of the sewing machine.

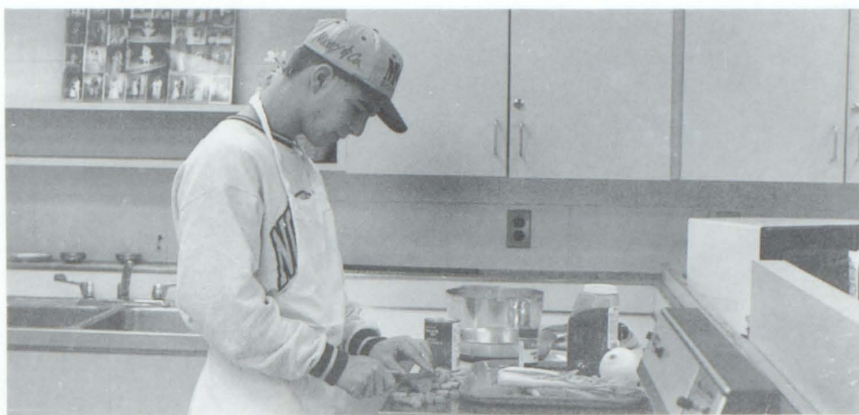

Typing was a necessary element when dealing with the work field of today's technology. Neil Burkdoll, 11, agreed, saying that it was very important because his dream to become a producer/engineer needed the computer skills learned in this class. Patti Benninghoff, 10, said, "I will have background information even though the programs change so fast."

Hands-on classes proved to be helpful in decision making for the future. With help from the hands-on classes, students were more at ease about making the right career choice.

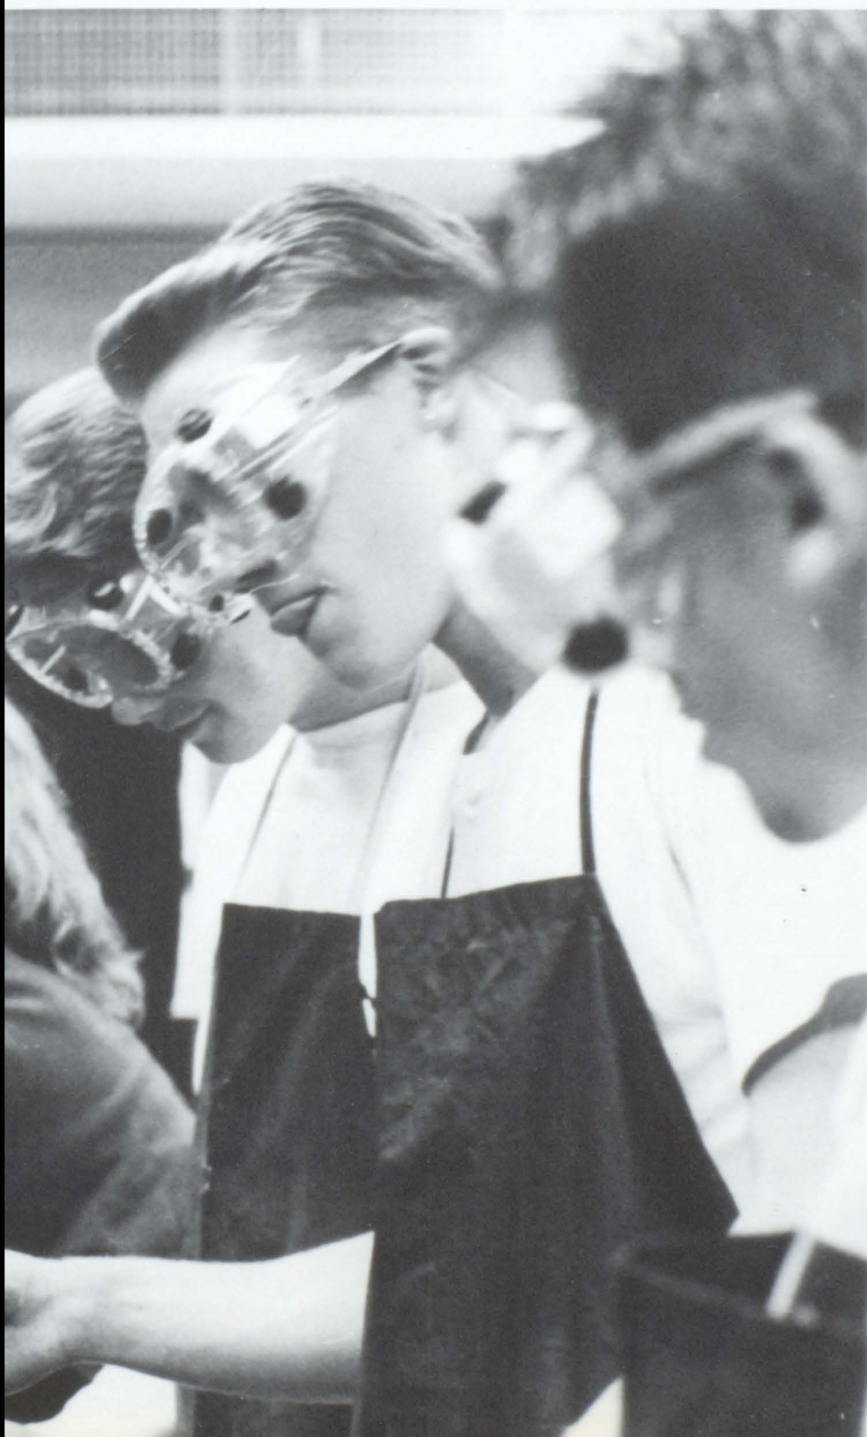

Learning the keys and skills to type can be difficult. Melissa Josefsky, 9, helped Jackie Bonoquaro, 9, print out her assignment.

LC's food classes can help teach students some of the essentials of life. Tim Kaczorowski, 12, cuts carrots for his recipe.

Kris Anderson

Marc Lazzaro

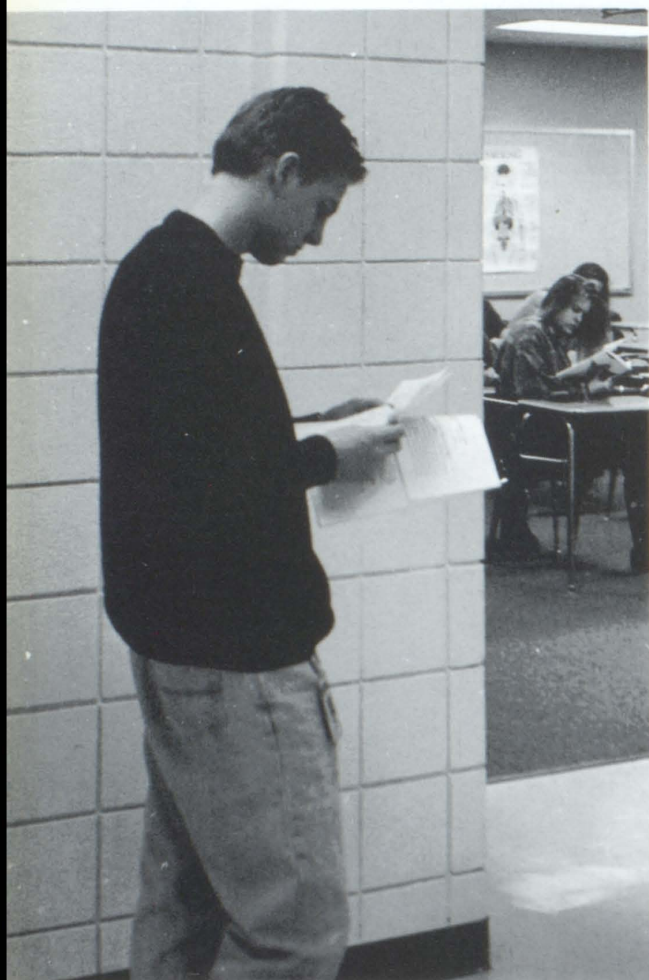

John Ourednik

Chemistry can sometimes be challenging. Marc Jamrose, 11, shows his friend the art of a blue flame.

An important grade is coming up. Missy Evancic, 12, pins together cloth for her project.

Instead of taking a study hall, many students help out teachers by being an aide. Andy Teibel, 12, delivers a pass as an office aide.

It seems as if an aide's job is never done. Nate Jazyk, 12, John Maas, 12, and Jon Moosmiller, 10, take time out to load the pop machines.

Helping out in the library is one thing students can help with as shown here by Melissa Morton, 12, and Mark McDermott, 10.

Being an aide at LC is very popular with students. Mark Hazard, 10, helps out in the bookstore by making copies.

Busy aides can be found all over LC. Amanda Noe, 12, works hard to finish organizing papers in the bookstore.

AIDES: the fun and helpful people

A cheery voice telling us what was for lunch or a helpful hand in class. What would we have done without them? Even though we enjoyed the pause in class, announcements and aides played an essential part of the school day.

There were aides who did anything from picking up attendance to grading papers. And that cheery voice you heard in the morning? Well, it either came from the intercom announcements or a new addition to LC, the T.V. announcements in the Freshmen Center. "The announcements have more of an effect on students when they get to watch their friends read the announcements," said Allison Felus, 9.

Many students agreed that the announcements were more effective coming from their peers rather than a school authority, even though Mr. Lowe and Mrs. Einsele did play a part in the selecting of students.

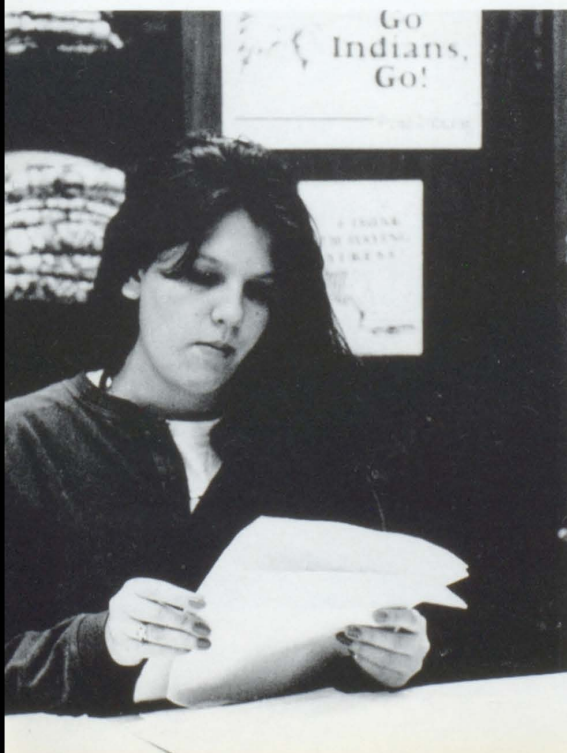

Aides were also necessary for the entire school to function properly. Many aides had different responsibilities. Matt Chmielewski, 11, an aide for the athletic office, said, "I get to take money out of the pop machines and fill them up with pop."

Besides their responsibilities, most aides agreed that they enjoyed what they did. Heather Penn, 12, said, "The reason I became an aide for the office is because the people in here are so nice."

Even though they had different jobs, all aides agreed that it was better than study hall. Jerry Porter, 12, said, "You get more freedom."

LC students never realized how important aides and announcements were to their lives. Though they did not get proper recognition, the students themselves knew that what they did was not only fun, but helpful.

An aide has many different jobs to perform. One job Kevin Dillon, 11, must perform is delivering papers from the office.

Steve Madziarczyk, 12, is doing his job of being an aide for drafting. Putting away materials is part of an everyday task for him.

HOMework

a daily companion

Since we were six years old, we have spent seven hours a day, five days a week in school learning and doing work. For most of us, school often has been brought home through homework.

Many students have faithfully done their homework. "Of course I do my homework, because it is necessary to pass all of my classes," stated Heather Regan, 10.

Other students have done their work because they thought it was needed. "I do homework so I can do well in school and get adequate grades," said Dan Phares, 9.

In some courses students received more homework than others. "I think English gives the most homework because I get it everyday," said Nathan Thompson, 9.

Many students found some classes' homework more time consuming than others. "German gives the most homework and to me Accounting II gives the least," stated Mike Belviy, 10.

Another student agreed. "To me German gives the most homework, and the least amount is geometry," said Eric Rogalski, 10.

Other students thought different classes gave more homework. "Algebra, I think, gives the most homework. It takes 15-20 minutes to just do my algebra work," said Luke Felton, 9.

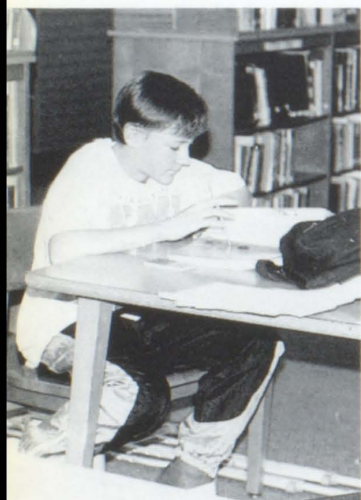

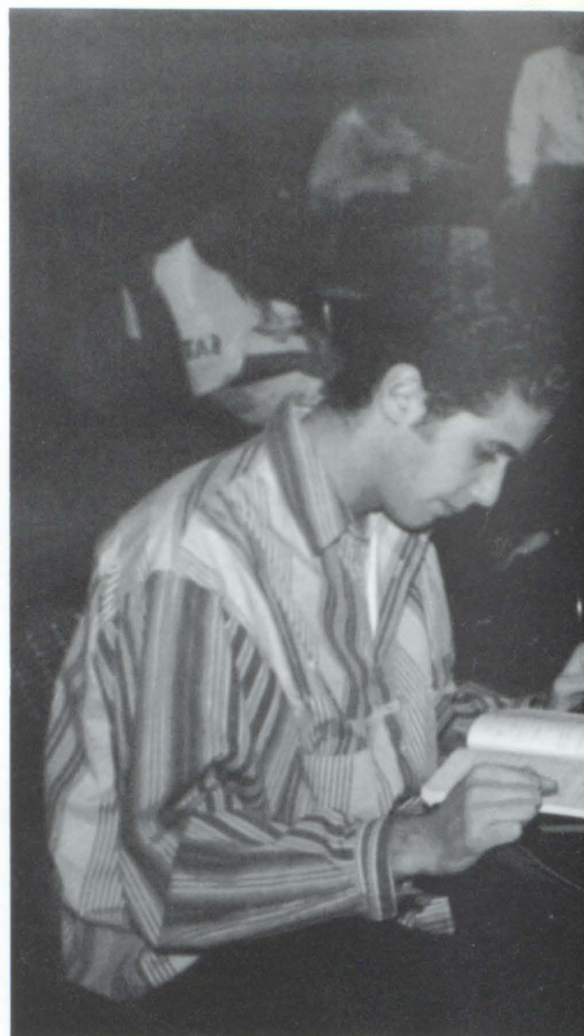

Even though some teachers allowed students to work on homework in class, some students felt it was not enough. "Teachers give me time in class, but it does not matter because I have so much left to do at home anyway," stated Bryan Kiernan, 9.

Another student agreed. "Teachers do not allow us enough time to do homework in class because they think they are the only ones that give homework and you will have time to finish it," stated Regan Isom, 10.

On the other hand, some students felt it was good to have work for home. "Most teachers allow us time in class to do most of our homework, but it is good because it helps us to reinforce what we have learned," said Tiffany Parlor, 9.

With different patterns of homework and different school habits, students usually made due with their options concerning homework. Whether we were for it or against it, homework existed in the lives of almost every student. With an almost perfect pattern of school days and hours, students adjusted and did what they had to do about homework.

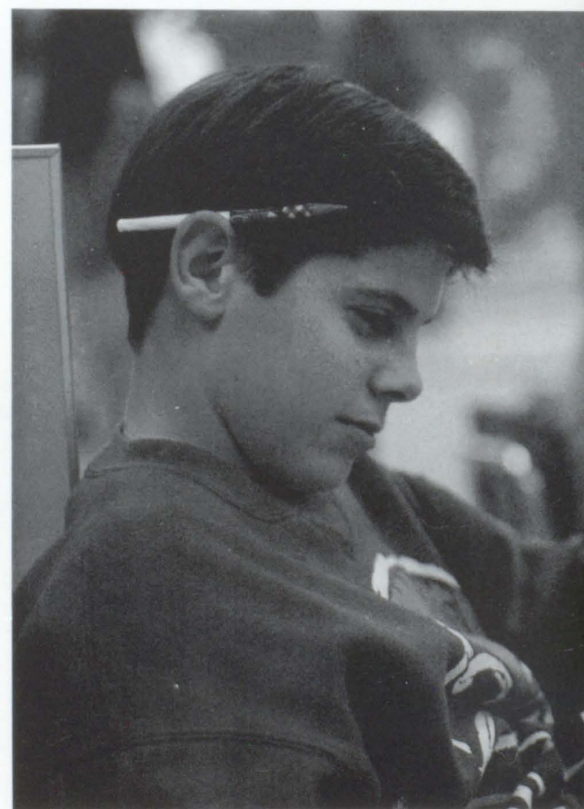

Kristy Graff

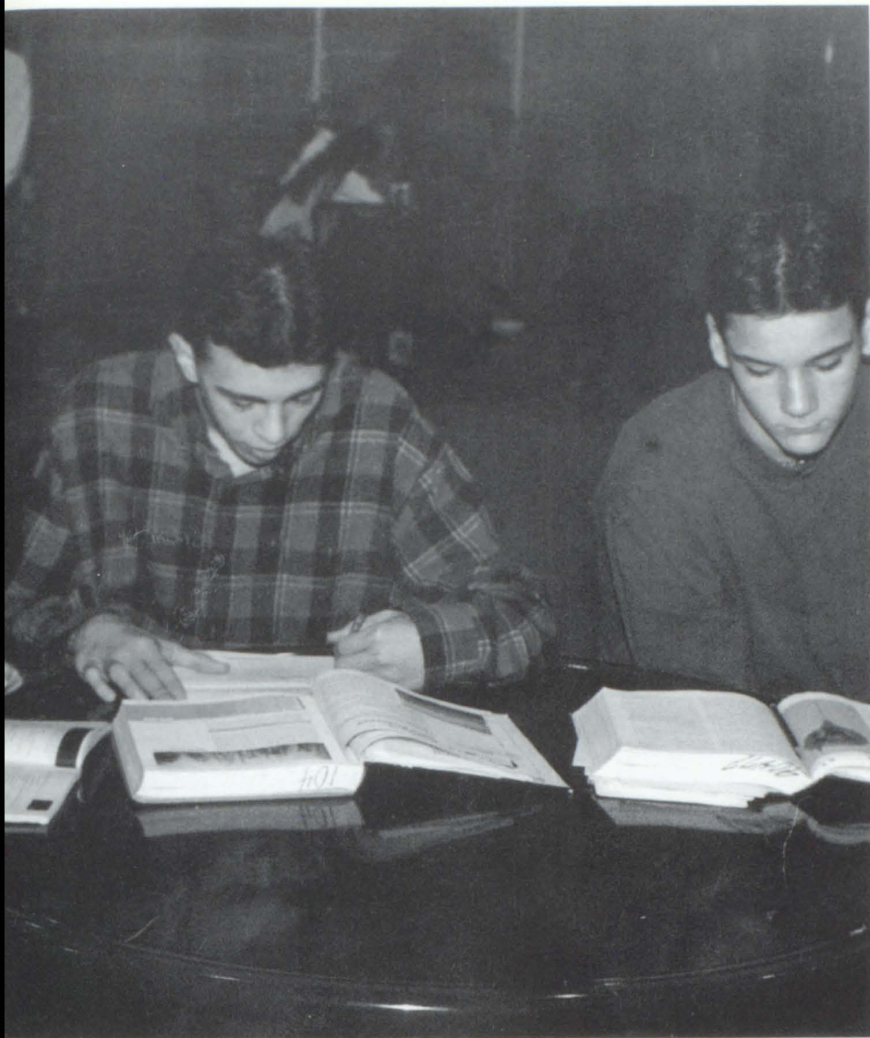

Not too many students find time to work in the library. Danny Hayes, 9, finishes his algebra instead of taking it home.

Dawn Hawrot

Students in shop at LC learn by hands on experience. Mike Corty, 12, works hard to finish his wood project.

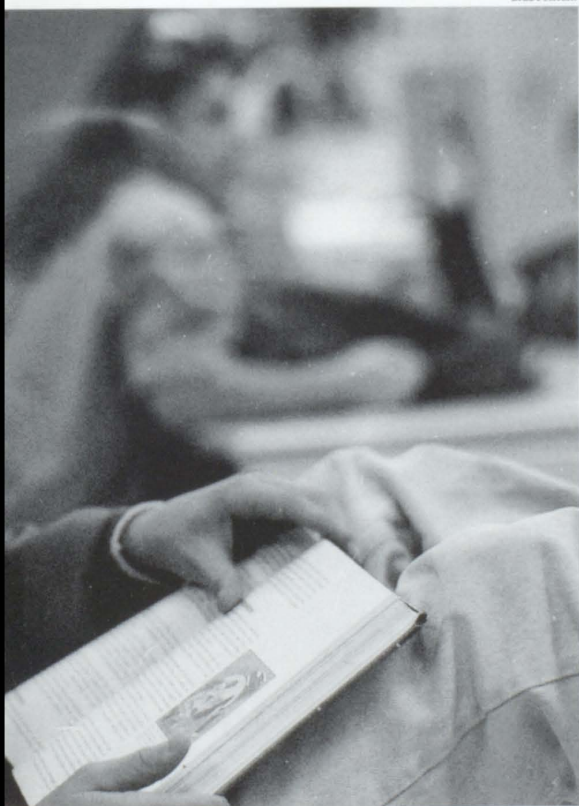

Cramming before a test is a common activity. Here Gardikiotes, Alec Blesich, and Jim Crook, all freshmen, take advantage of the new freshmen commons.

Homework is the last thing a student wants to have over the weekend. Jill Bailly, 12, works quietly to finish her so called "homework."

Kathleen Marshall

Brad Peterson

Beth Urbanecyk

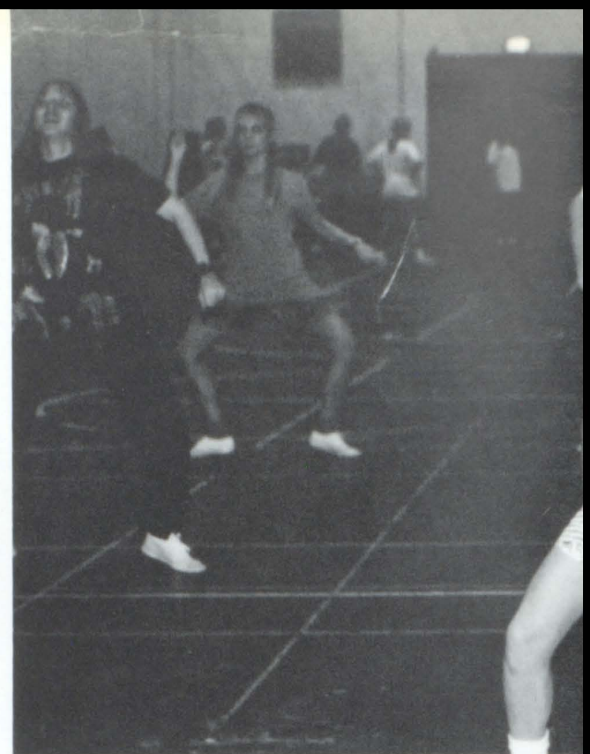

There is not always work to do every minute of every class. Jeremy Gorlic, 10, studies for a test during his free class time.

Jeremy Capp, 10, performs his job of folding papers for a hockey book. He places every sheet carefully into a folder.

The LC Tribe of Pride has obtained many awards and honors. The band is practicing hard for another award winning performance.

Gina DiPasqu

Classes That Entertain lc's performers

Although LC holds high standards in academics, it was also well known for other things too. Band, choir, and Centralettes are among them. With 2400 students enrolled, it was not hard to see why LC was so successful.

LC's band was ranked as one of the nine best in the state of Indiana. On October 23, 1993, the LC Marching Band and Color Guard went to Indianapolis to compete for state. The long hours of practice paid off. Their hard work earned them ninth in state. Although happy, the students and their director, John Cook, were even more happy to receive: best drum major, best marching, best general effect, and best color guard throughout the rest of the year. "We have worked really hard, and we're all proud of each other. We have reached a great achievement and hope to place higher next year," stated band member Rachael Reid, 9.

Besides competing, the band practices and holds concerts. Many students and teachers appreciate the hard work and time put into the band. "I think they're OK. They practice a lot and they sound really good," stated freshman Karin Hylek.

Centralettes played a large role in the success of the band. They danced, did flag routines, and much more. There was about 50 centralettes total. What did it take to be a centralette? Team members said, "Talent, a lot of dedication, and a positive attitude." Angie Herman the team captain stated, "Many long hours of hard work go into being a Centralette. As captain, I teach others my talents." The team not only performed at school games, but they also compete--not only separately, but with the band as well. They competed every season and practiced every day after school. In 1992-1993 they ranked eighth at state for winter guard and in 1994 they ranked ninth at state along with the band.

Choir, like band, takes many hours of practice, hard work, and energy. "I live, breathe, and eat music," Tina Dohl, 11, a member of the choir stated.

Melissa Koczur, 11, added, "I know many people who are in choir and I know that they work really hard to be as good as they possibly can. They are excellent singers." LC choir performs many concerts and sings many numbers throughout the year. "I think choir is a great high school activity. I like to attend the choir concerts and support them as much as possible," said Stacey Snyder, 11.

Although academics played a large role at LC, other hard working classes such as band, choir, and Centralettes deserve credit also.

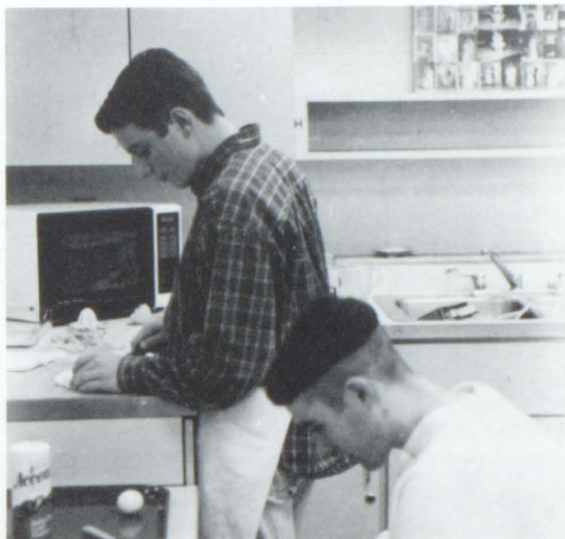

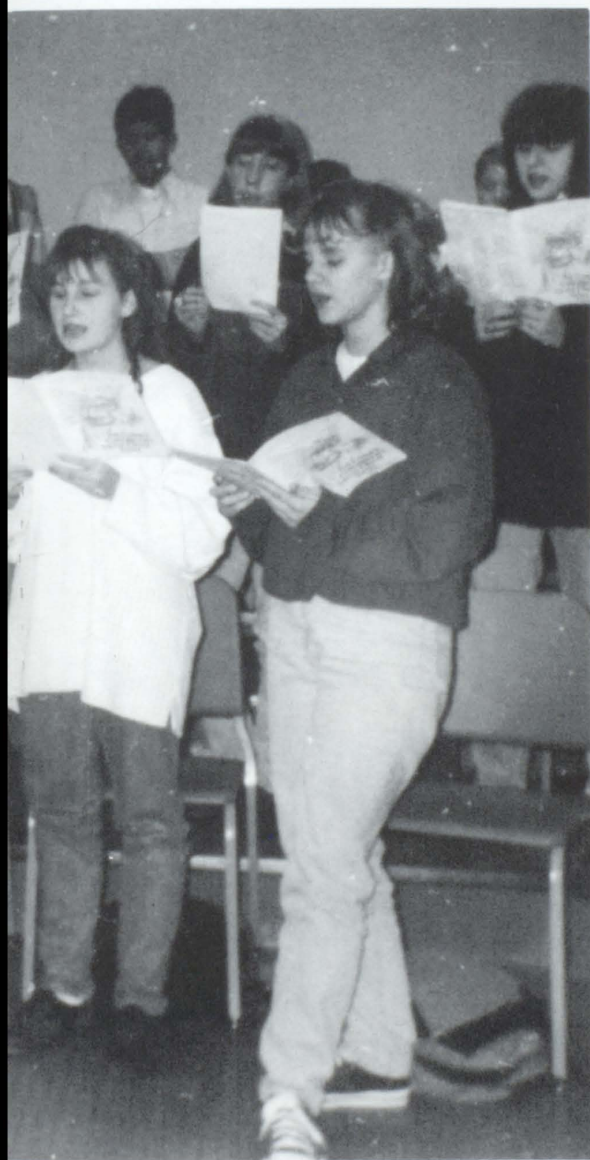

Stacy Miller

The Centralettes, including Missy Jenkins, 10, work hard to memorize the steps to Janet Jackson's "If".

Eric Pirowski, 10, and Chris Karabatsos, 10, work together in the Food I room to prepare a dish to share with the class.

Cristin Cargal

Melissa Weaver

Marc Lazzaro

It's beginning to look a lot like Christmas for the LC Varsity choir as they rehearse for their annual holiday concert.

Getting your hands dirty is part of ceramics. Amy Bergren, 12, makes a day bowl for a project in her class.

Dan Williams

Jen Albin, 10, Scott Lutes, 10, and Nicole Havel, 12, fry bacon for breakfast in Foods I. Eggs were also a part of this breakfast.

TESTING

the final analysis

Testing. It's something we all have to do every day. But do students at LC really think it is necessary?

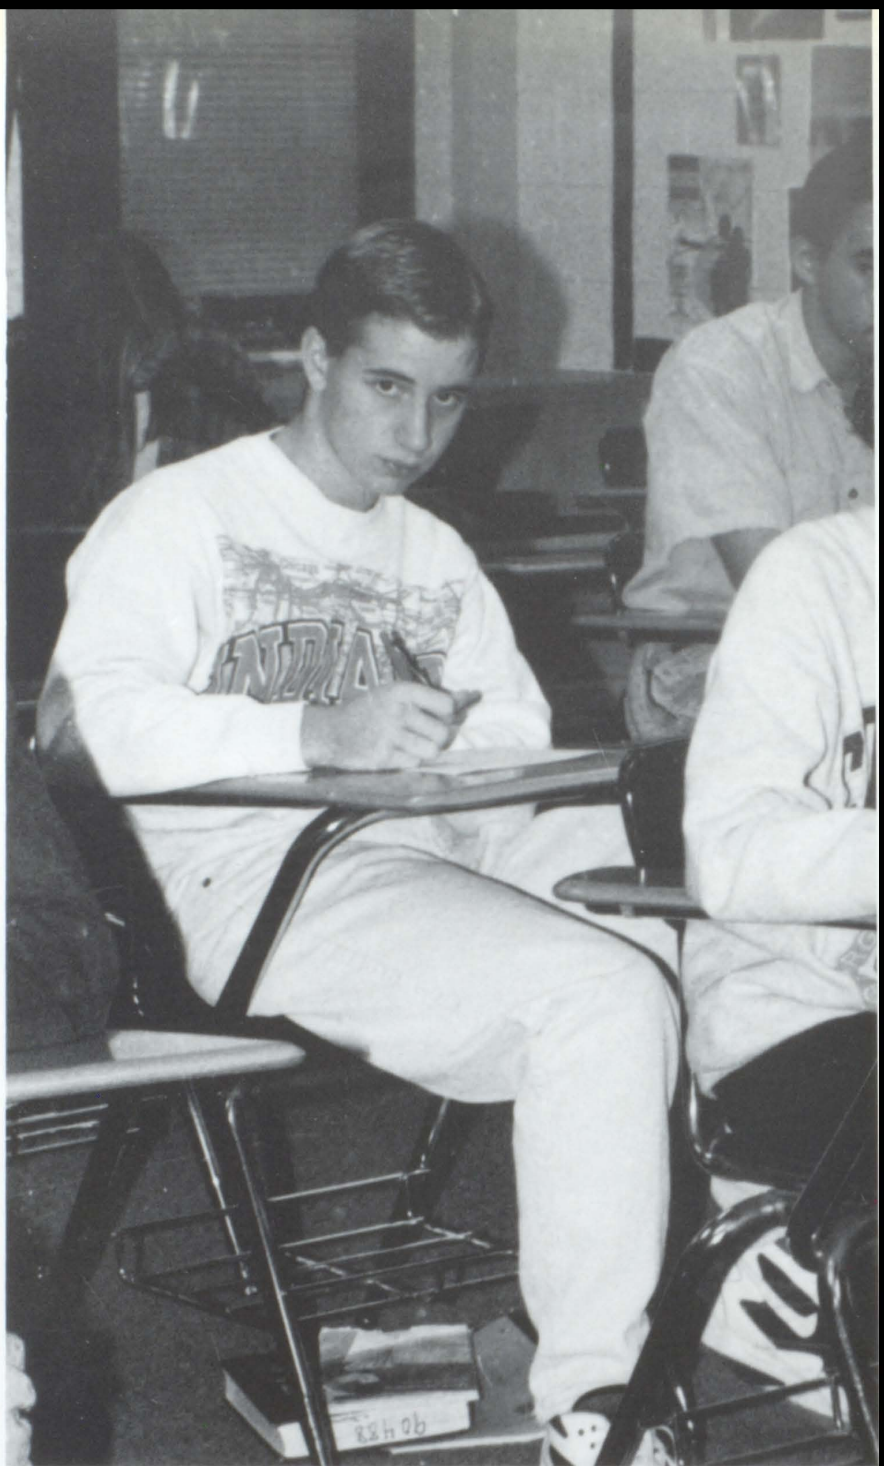

Tom Markovich, 12, did not have a problem with testing; he said, "Testing at LC is all right. The only problem I have is Mr. Rutherford's class. He goes over a chapter in two to three days maximum. All my other classes have very fair tests."

Testing at LC was said to be fair, but most students agreed they would rather not take them. Courtney Tucker, 10, commented, "I think LC testing is okay. All classes have different tests and some are harder than others but if it was up to me there would be no tests whatsoever!"

Students liked the fact that most teachers offer re-testing because it helped their grades. There are some teachers at LC who did not offer re-tests. One student stated, "Mr. Lemon does not offer re-tests because he feels that he's helping prepare us for college."

Tony Wise, 12, summed up LC's general feeling for testing with, "The only thing you really learn to do is to walk or talk. I think students should be graded on the work and effort they put through day by day."

Kristy Graff

Mark Sills, 9, concentrates hard while taking an English test in Mr. Lawson's class.

Kevin Beck, 9, Denise Bolanowski, 9, and Ron Sledge, 11, work on a test in Ms. Kaniewski's physical science class.

Stephanie Sessa

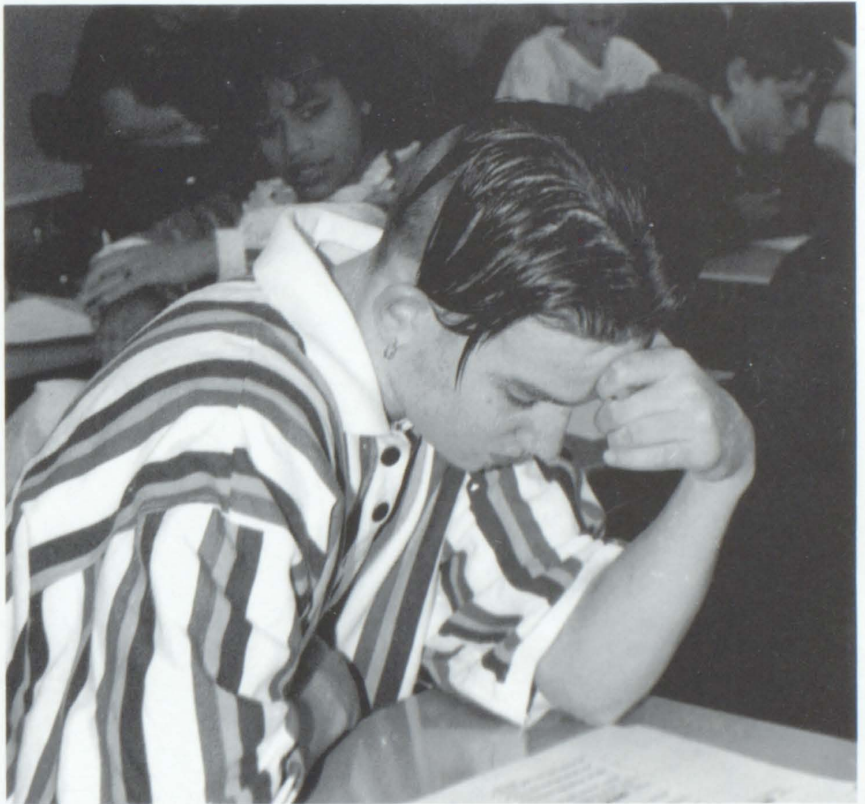

Testing is an important part of school. Paul Morache, 10, and Stephanie Olsen, 10, work on a literature test in Mrs. Kazmier's first hour.

Missing school usually means make-up work, Barbie Engle, 12., concentrates on her test.

Eric Smolinski, 10, takes an English class in the Freshman Center during second hour. Many non-freshman students could be found in a variety of freshman classes.

Dawn Hawrot

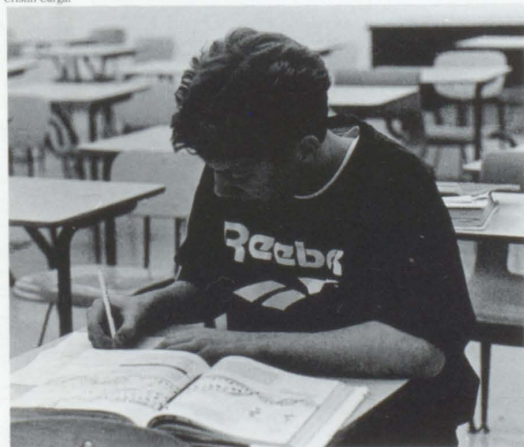

John Ourednik

Ruthleen Marshall

Re-testing at LC gives students a chance to get the best grade they can. Scott Lefko, 10, takes advantage of this by doing correctives for his test.

Michelle Kinzer, 10, and Lynne Colbert, 10, concentrate on finishing their geology test in Mr. Valse's class.

Cheerleading

"My freshman year, I got to see a football game down at the Hoosier Dome, but I didn't think I'd get a chance to cheer there," related cheerleader Joanne McCormick. "It had always been a dream." When LC's football team advanced to the State finals game, McCormick's dream became a reality. "We had fun going to State with the football team," said Lisa Dorneker. "All those people were actually cheering with us. We really got into the game."

Another highlight for the cheerleaders was their third place victory at the Great America competition. Dorneker attributed the squad's success to a relaxed attitude. "We had fun there. When we began the year, we didn't really trust each other, but after we lost regionals we thought, 'Why not have fun?' That took the stress off of us."

McCormick added that the squad always united for the competitions. "We don't get much school support. They seem to think cheerleading is really easy, that you don't need athletic ability to do what we do. Like anyone can put somebody on their shoulders and make pyramids. That was our big thing for competitions, making pyramids," said McCormick.

Cheerleaders take in the sights of St. John from their seats aboard their contribution to the Homecoming Parade.

Annie Hiduke, Kristen Bogner, and Becky Komarowski practice synchronizing with their cheerleading moves.

Michael G. Furman
April 21, 1976--October 22, 1993

Remember Mike as he would want to be remembered.
Mike had a beautiful smile,
and a heart of gold.
We will never forget Mike for touching
each and all of our hearts.

Crystel Ann Guziar
May 22, 1976--April 27, 1993

Crystel was a very talented person. She had a gift for art, wrote beautiful poetry, and touched the hearts of many. She cared very deeply about her friends and family, and no matter how hard things got, Crystel was always right there to lend a helping hand. She truly had a heart of gold.

Crys,
Although you are not here with us, we want you to know how many lives you have touched. You were and still are a dear friend to many. There will never be a day that you are not thought of. We love you and we miss you, Crys.

JUST THINK....

DO YOU THINK?

HEY!

AREN'T
WE CUTE!!

FOR DINNER

If you were a cartoon character who would you be?
Why?

Marc Lazzaro--
"Bugs Bunny because I like his ears."

Paul Craven--
"Popeye he's big and strong."

Hillary Webb--
"Papa Smurf he's very intelligent."

Tim Smith--
"Underdog because he's big and strong."

The most original excuses, from stu- dents, for being late to class:

10. There was a train and I couldn't get through
9. There was an accident
8. The snow was too
deep to go fast
7. There was a fight in the hallway
6. I got lost in the freshmen center
5. I was talking to a teacher
4. I didn't hear the bell
3. I had to go to the bathroom
2. My locker wouldn't open
1. I overslept

What LC teachers did to annoy to their teachers that their students do to them:

10. Laughing in class a lot
9. Not doing the homework assigned
8. Throwing things in the classroom
7. Bringing toys to school
6. Not listening to the teachers
5. Being late for class
4. Popping their gum
3. Asking questions that they already know the answer to just to waste time
2. Nag / complain
1. Talking while the teacher is talking

The 1994 Quiver was printed by Herff-Jones Yearbooks, Inc., at the Shawnee Mission, Kansas plant. Ms. Susan Taylor served as the company yearbook representative. The color lithograph cover was drawn by Quiver artists Michelle Bodie and Lauren Rusnak, who also designed the end sheets and other special artistic presentations within the book itself.

The book was printed on 100 lb. Eurogloss paper. Copy appears in 10 point Avant Guard, headlines are Bookman, and folio tabs are 36 point Bookman. Caption were printed in 8 point New Century Schbkl with a 20 percent gray background and enclosed in a hairline tool as border.

All photos have a 2 point tool border. All copy was typed on MacWrite II or MacWrite Pro and imported to the pages, which were done on Herff-Jones Pagemaster through PageMaker 4.2 and 5.0. All computer work was completed on one of the 19 Macintosh computers in the classroom. John Giolas Photography, Inc., Merrillville, took all senior portraits and underclass photos as well as group pictures. Quiver photographers are responsible for action photos.

Jen Griffin and Lynn Jackowski edited the 1994 Quiver, with Michelle Warner serving as assistant editor and Ms. Shirley Hewlett acting as adviser.

SCHERERVILLE'S BANK

Opened June 20, 1989

Ground was broken for the Schererville Office of Bank of Highland on March 26, 1988. The bank opened for business 14 months later, on June 20, 1989. The building totaled over 20,000 square feet with three floors plus a lower level.

Expanded in 1993

In 1993, the Bank expanded its Schererville operation by purchasing a 7,500 square foot building in the nearby Lincoln Ridge Plaza. This facility will house the Bank's accounting department and make Bank of Highland one of Schererville's larger employers!

Full-Service

Our office is full-service...meaning virtually almost any financial need can be met here...from checking, saving and investing to borrowing. We also offer the convenience of safe deposit boxes and the ability to pay utility bills, including Schererville Water.

One time I challenged my class to achieve a grade of 80% or above on a research paper. If they could reach this level, I would teach the next class standing on my head. They all met the challenge, and I, unfortunately, lived up to my end of the bargain!
-Tim Vasser

Being a Freshmen Center teacher, I do not know many of the teachers who work at the high school. This is my first year here, or anywhere for that matter, so I look rather young. As I entered the teacher's lounge in the high school for the first time, I was surprised to find myself being yelled at to get out of the teacher's lounge!

Two years ago, my 4th hour class and I were off on a tangent talking about the sixties and popular dances from that time, including "the twist." I agreed to demonstrate it because I figured that when I put the radio on, the song that's on cannot possibly be appropriate to do the twist to. I put the radio on, found the oldies station, and believe it or not, the first song we heard was the very beginning of Chubby Checker saying, "Let's do the twist." Needless to say, the class went wild and I, by the way, did a pretty good job in my demonstration.

If only I had been

BORN RICH instead of

SO GOOD LOOKING...

Several years ago, Pam Miller and I were team teaching in the library. We had made up a number of trivia questions. The students were frantically searching for answers. When one student opened his question: "How many legs does a crab have?", he quipped, "I don't know how many other crabs have, but Mrs. Miller has two."
-Dixie Whitehouse

Mrs. Miller recalls the same incident as Mrs. Whitehouse, however, she remembers a slightly altered situation...

Several years ago, Dixie Whitehouse and I were team teaching in the library. We had made up trivia questions for the students and they were desperately searching for the answers. "how many legs does a crab have?", he remarked, "I don't know how many other crabs have, but Mrs. Whitehouse has two!"
-Pam Miller

Once I attended a workshop during the school day, but forgot to tell my classes I'd be gone. Some of my students called home to see if I was sick, and my father answered. He told them I was in school and they told him I wasn't. When I got home I had to deal with a furious father who thought I was not going to work. To make a long story short, I was turned in by my students for ditching.
-Kerry Zajcek

One time, a student stole the teacher's edition of my lab manual. A few weeks later this same student turned in a lab. In the middle of a data table the student wrote "student answers will vary" because that's what the teachers edition said. That's not all; four of his friends copied directly from him! Needless to say, I caught the culprit.

BLOOD DRIVE

lc students help others, even if it hurts a little bit

"I got to see people pass out before my eyes!" Matt Mansueto (11), vice president of the Medical Professions Club, reminisced about the blood drive, which his club sponsored. "I remember the warm feeling I got from helping. Even though I didn't give blood (I had to run the concession stand), I got to save lives in my own way through the blood drive."

After a battle with the athletic department, the MPC obtained the right to host the blood drive in the fieldhouse March 23. Of the 170 students who signed up, an outstanding 140 students showed up to donate. However, several were turned away following tests.

MPC members had to be trained by the Red Cross before they would be allowed to assist in the Blood Drive. "I got to know actual Red Cross people," said Mansueto. "I always wanted to go into the medical profession, so I thought (working with them) would give me a taste of the medical profession. They introduced me to many aspects."

Nick DePirro (12), president of the MPC, said that he worked the blood drive because he considered it a community service. He continued by describing the donors. "They felt good, because they liked to do something to help others. They either felt really good or really sick."

DePirro's only qualm with the blood drive was that he did not have the opportunity to collect his desired reward because he had to finish cleaning up after everybody else had finished. "By the time I got around to the box of squeazy sponge balls, they were all gone," said DePirro.

Senior Derek Orr raises his arm, because he is sure he has given his fair share of blood at the blood drive.

FRESHMEN WING new concepts

Peering through a classroom window in the freshmen center, it could easily be seen that the teachers were practicing nontraditional teaching methods. The classrooms were arranged so that teachers of the same subjects would be grouped together in adjacent classrooms. This setup, which was referred to as the "cluster system," allowed a single teacher to lecture all the classes in the cluster at once, instead of each teacher addressing his own class every day. Freshmen Center principal, Ms. Linda Einsele, said, "Why have five teachers give an introduction to Shakespeare when one who's gone to Europe and has pictures and postcards and is really into it can give the talk to all of them at once?" For addressing large groups of students at once, the LGI room was frequently used.

The cluster system demanded that each teacher in the cluster teach at the same pace as the others. Einsele commented that most teachers liked this system because they favored following an agenda. Also, if a student would not work for one teacher but would work for another teacher in the cluster, the student could easily be swapped without falling behind.

Einsele said that the freshmen center's teaching methods have been successful. During 1992-93, 33 percent of the freshmen failed English I, but this past year only 14 percent failed English I. "We are giving (the freshmen) a nurturing environment for their changing needs. We are giving them a large area to be adolescents," said Einsele of the freshmen center philosophy. "They are a close knit group. They've pulled together as Indians. They came from middle schools and parochial schools, and now they're united as Indians."

Taking advantage of the luxuries in the Freshmen Wing, Darrin Porter, 9, and Steve Lopez, 10, buy snacks before school.

TRIBE GAINS RESPECT THROUGH WINS

LC's Tribe of Pride enjoyed a successful year, dominating all invitationals attended and winning the ISSMA District Contest. The ISSMA win qualified the band for regionals, which had not been taken by LC for the last 12 years. Band director, Mr. John Cook, stated, "I didn't think that success would come so quickly, since I've only been here a couple of years, but the hard work and determination of the band really allowed them to excel."

The band received superior ratings and went on to place as runner up at regionals; a ninth place was gained in the state-level competition.

Just being able to compete at state was a thrill after all the missed years. Jen Braatz, 11, stated, "Going to state was exciting because there was so many people to perform in front of."

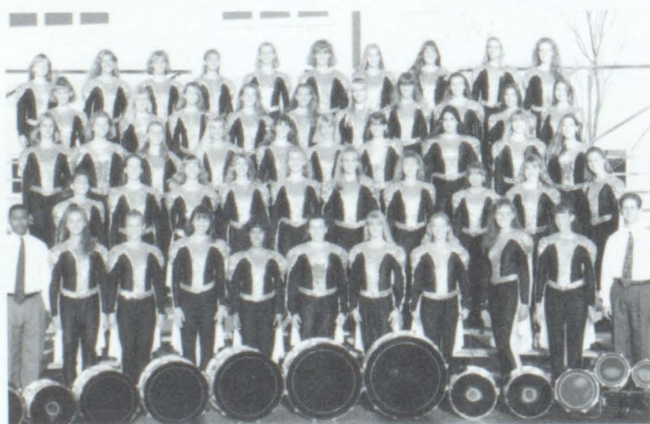

The Centralettes also enjoyed sweet success throughout the year, as they were a controlling force at invitationals. Winter guard placed third in the state preliminaries and was ranked fourth in the state in open class. Varsity and JV dance team received first at the dance invitational hosted by LC. Liz Towe, Erin Brietzke, and Dina Dywan, 11, all agreed that the best part of Centralettes was "...performing on the dance team for the basketball games."

Equally exciting events for the band were performing for the Today Show and accepting an invitation to the Orange Bowl in 1994, where they will be one of the only 10 bands performing.

The front running flute section of the Tribe of Pride keep their minds on their performance.

Choral program grows

Vocal music classes offered a combination of hard work, personal enjoyment and goal fulfillment, and listening to music for an hour of school time can be relaxing-unless of course you're listening to that one sour note being practiced again and again.

Choir was also a class where the students learned to work well with each other, at times even depending upon each other for their group practices. Cooperation was judged to be the most essential element of choir participation because the activities included "...learning music, learning parts, mixing parts, smoothing the music out, and finally singing together," according to Sunny Duncan, 11.

Choir members felt much pride in their work, believing that other members' efforts were necessary. Holly Orr, 11, said, "In choir everyone gives their all and works hard at becoming the best that we can be."

Although enjoyable, most saw the classes being worthwhile as well. Stacey Krzanowsky, 12, thought that choir was worthwhile because, "It's been fun and also a learning experience."

For others just the sheer use of their vocal chords was enough; Ed Ortiz, 11, said he liked choir because "It's the only class where I get to be loud!"

Some choir members take time from their busy tour of Toronto to take a picture in front of the beautiful waterfall at Canada's Wonderland.

Specialty choirs enjoy choice performances

Voices that carry the way to Toronto held true for the LC choirs. With a lot of sweets sold for fund raising purposes, the choir raised enough money to make a run for the border. It was a trip which choir director, Mr. Michael T. Lewis, said was for a year well done. The choir also had the honor of singing for the opening of the World Cup Soccer Tournament last June.

Under the direction of Mr. Lewis and Ms. Sandi Hobbs, the choir recieved a Divison I rating in Group I from ISSMA. The concert choir matched last year's ranking by placing fifth in the state.

The Counterpoints and Trebleaires made about 40 show appearances. Not including those performances, choir and Trebleaires put in about 10 hours of work a week.

Choir member Michelle Gilbert, 12, said, "It's like one big family. We've been together for a long time."

Dana Jones, 12, agreed. She said, "It's a commitment all right." She added, "Mr. Lewis is like a friend to us. We've all been together for four years."

Members of the brand new Guys' Quartet, Steve Kitts, 12, summed up his choir years by saying, "It's gratifying."

Jeff Beard, Casey Bodak, Dana Jones, Lisa Waite, and Michelle Gilbert anxiously await their performances for all of the banks in the area.

Freshmen Social Lives

According to one LC upper-classman, social lives during the freshman year are either nonexistent or overactive. Some felt their habits were a little different during this transitional year. One senior claimed, "They seem to eat hot dogs and ice cream for breakfast!" At least that's what she noted about her freshman sister and her friends. Also, "They like to get in the back of an upperclassman's car and yell out the window at guys, because it's cool to be seen with seniors." To some older students, the social habits of freshmen remain a total mystery.

Any freshman class is traditionally judged as a rowdy bunch, but individual freshmen often see themselves quite differently. One freshman noted, "There's just so many people who are wanna-be gang members. I don't think they know who they are. I'm sure they aren't really into that; they're just trying to be cool. They're mostly talk."

Some freshmen, like Tommy

Toso, believe this age group to be more rowdy than necessary.

Another popular freshman pastime was talking on the telephone for a marathon amounts of time, primarily as a result of freshman year being their first real opportunity to date. Toso, who claimed not to be a frequent abuser of the telephone, said that some freshman girls talk all night long.

Mary Becklenberg said that her social life revolves around the friends she has made through working in theater. "I'm friends with them because I'm actually in theater, so I spend a lot of time with them. We hang out together, at the Paragon after the shows and at each other's houses."

Becklenberg continued by saying that she planned to babysit over the summer. "Most of us can't work at fast food restaurants because we're 15 and can't drive. However, like most freshmen, I'll be taking driver's education."

Cortt Ross lets loose on his dirt bike to let off a little steam.

Freshman Center

They came in awe. They were silent as they slowly inched their way down the corridor, clutching in their sweaty palms their schedules and locker information. Perhaps this is how all freshmen looked on registration day, but these students had cause to be taken aback and were not quite certain of where they were headed.

This batch of freshmen was the first class to be based in the Freshmen Center, boasting its wide open social areas, its own bookstore and skylights illuminating the bright and wide-open gathering areas fully equipped with tables and chairs for brief socializing between classes and before school. Lindsey Gordon ,9, noted the skylights, saying, "[The skylights] look nice and help make it brighter in here. The high school seems dark. I think the social areas will be used. Students will stop there and talk there whenever they have a break."

Kari Halls ,9, agreed with Gordon, saying, "[The social areas] are really neat. It's a way you can sit and talk with your friends. And I also like the clusters in the freshman wing. This way you can't get lost." In the cluster system, classes of the same subject were grouped together in adjacent classrooms, allowing the teachers to work together.

Freshmen Center assistant principal, Mr. Phil Apple, described the philosophy of the Freshmen Center by saying, "The basic concept is an improvement on the overall procedure of learning and for the total comfort for the teacher and the student body."

Although the Freshmen Center facilities were impressive, some freshmen felt secluded from the rest of the high school. Shauna Dillon (9) commented, "I feel like the freshmen wing is a totally different school, and I'm being secluded from the rest of the high school."

Kevin Bluer (9) said that the Freshmen Center seemed eerie to him. "It's kind of like a kindergarten. It's weird, because with the paint and the carpeting, it looks like elementary school. But that's okay. I'd like to change its name though. "Freshmen Center" sounds like a home."

The Center contained its own set of offices; the staff did not have to journey cross-country to get their mail.

Students enjoyed relaxing, reading, and doing homework in the pit.

The newly finished Freshman Center helped accomodate everyone.

Many more computers and computer labs were added to the Freshman Center for educational purposes.

Opening ~~soon~~ in 1994

The Class of 1997 will forever hold an important distinction: They were the first to inhabit the long-awaited Freshmen Center. Years in the planning, the new Center offered more than just the planned state-of-the-art environment.

Students had always depicted the ninth grade as an important transitional year, but this particular school year proved different in some of these usual aspects.

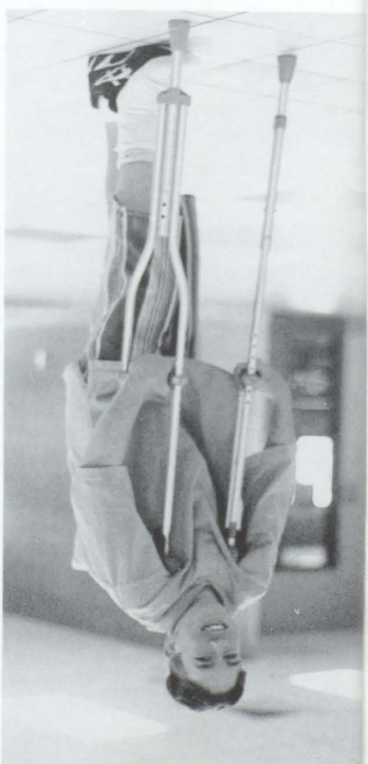

Although freshmen appreciated the facility, some openly feared that the true transition into high school had been delayed for a year. Perhaps the freshmen were only anxious to be upper-classmen, but even older students sympathized. Diana Harris, 11, claimed it would have been an easier transition between middle school and LC if the Freshmen Center did not serve as a median. She said, "When (the freshmen) start next year, it's going to be like starting at a whole other high school."
